Stewards of the Land

Photo Documentary

Stillwater Public Library Gallery: March-April

Artist Reception: Saturday, April 30, 2-4 pm

About the Exhibit

Through the very nature of their work, regenerative farmers are creators and inventors, stewards and ambassadors, via the land they till and the food they grow. From sunrise to sunset and through every season, they make the earth more vibrant and hardy. The richest butters. The freshest carrots. We owe much to these stewards of the land.

This traveling exhibition helps people understand the relevance of regenerative practices in today's world of disappearing bees and unpredictable climate. It's essential to live with a conscience and these farmers are leading the way.

About the Artist

Laurie Schneider has been photographing this way of life for over 20 years. Her admiration is as clear and pure as the feelings we get from the moments she captures. From lionhearted barn cats to hand turned goat cheese, Laurie's work will undoubtedly make you hungry for something farm fresh.

When she's not behind the camera, Laurie is an avid practitioner of the very lifestyle she documents. An active conservationist and beekeeper, Laurie knows the ins and outs of the land, its creatures and the people who love them, giving her a nuanced understanding of what moments around the farm are destined to make people feel the importance of stewardship.
